Programme Overview

This degree programme will provide you with a thorough working knowledge of accounting and finance theory and methods in the context of social science. You will learn how to prepare and interpret financial and managerial information for a variety of users, as well as gaining an understanding of the theory and practice of investment and finance.

Your contact hours will vary depending on your module. Full information about contact hours is provided in individual module profiles. Most modules have two hours lecture and one hour seminar per week. You will, therefore, have approximately twelve hours of taught contact time per week. However, you are expected to do at least another 28 hours of private study per week depending on the modules you have selected.

The programme is accredited by the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB), which is an internationally recognised award of excellence in business education.

In addition to the core and compulsory modules, you will be able to choose various optional modules from a list of approved modules across the university. Upon completion of this degree, you may be eligible for exam exemptions from professional bodies such as ICAEW, ACCA, CIMA and AIA.

This programme is relevant to practice in professional settings and public sector bodies through our offering of more optional modules e.g., Sustainability reporting for the businesses economic, social and environmental impact and their contributions towards the goal of sustainable development. Another example is our Taxation module in the final year that is directly linked into tax advisory profession. In addition to a very current syllabus content, our students are encouraged to participate in experiential learning which is embedded in various modules as well as in extra curricula activities. Our experiential learning activities are supported by our staff and dedicated in-house Careers, Employability, Placement, and Alumni Relations (CEPAR) team.

Programme Structure

The tables below provide a list of the modules that make up your programme.

Each module is worth a specified number of credits: you can take a combination of core and compulsory modules enabling you to cover key subject knowledge. Some programmes have option modules which enable you to develop your own interests.

Each level of your programme requires a certain number of credits. The number of option modules you can take depends on the number of core modules at a given level and this is also influenced by the requirements of the regulatory requirements for professionally accredited programmes. Some programmes also have pre and co-requisites, and these are included in individual module information.

Your learning will be led by the latest research, and modules can change periodically to reflect developments in the discipline.

If we have insufficient numbers of students interested in an option module, it may not be offered. If an option module will not be run, we will advise you as soon as possible and help you choose an alternative module.

The core and compulsory modules available on your programme are as follows:

Core modules run throughout the programme, but with an increasing ability as you progress to select optional modules of your choice from an approved list, culminating in the final year of the programme when you will submit a double-weighted accounting research project that gives you scope for investigating, in depth, an accounting, tax, finance or management topic (broadly defined) of personal interest or carry out analytical accounting case studies.

Learning and Teaching

Your overall workload consists of class contact hours, independent learning, and assessment activity, with each ECTS credit taken equivalent to 20 hours of student effort. While your actual contact hours may depend on the option modules you select, the information available on our webpages give an indication of how much time you will need to allocate to different activities.

When not attending lectures, seminars and other timetabled sessions you will be expected to continue learning independently through self-study. Typically, this will involve reading journal articles and books, working on individual and group projects, undertaking research in the library, preparing coursework assignments and presentations, and for other types of assessments and examinations.

How we'll assess you

Summative assessment(s) usually take place at the end of each module, although some may have interim assessments throughout. Assessment methods might include written examinations and a range of coursework assessments such as essays, reports, portfolios, performance, presentations and projects for example. The marks from summative assessments count towards your module mark.

Each module normally contains at least one piece of practice or formative assessment for which you receive feedback. Formative assessments are developmental and any results do not count towards your module mark, but they are an important part of your learning.

Staff involved in delivering the different elements of the programme

You will be taught by an experienced teaching team whose expertise and knowledge are closely matched to the content of the modules on your programme. The team includes senior academics, professional practitioners, specialists with industry experience, demonstrators and technical officers.

Postgraduate research students who have undertaken appropriate training may also contribute to the teaching of seminars if their research specialism is directly related to the topic of the module and may also be involved in practical classes, project work and field trips. All contributions will be carried out under the supervision of the module leader.

Extra costs you may experience

This may include e-books (ideally with unlimited concurrent usage) or a digitised chapter extract, supported by a limited number of print books (where available). You may prefer to buy your own copies for high demand titles.
Printing	In most cases, written coursework such as essays and projects are submitted online. However it may be necessary to submit a hard copy of some projects, business projects and dissertations. The costs of printing a hard copy for submission of such work will be your responsibility. You will also have to cover the cost of photocopying.
